A.J. Committee Aims For Equality For Jews In Soviet; Right To Emigrate Freely

A comprehensive report on the policies of the Soviet Union and its allies toward Jews since the end of World War II has been issued by the American Jewish Committee. The thirty-five-page report was based on studies made by the Committee's European offices. It is entitled "The Plight of the Jews in Eastern Europe."

Herbert B. Ehrmann, of Boston, Mass., president of the agency, in announcing its publication, warned that Soviet policy "threatened the extinction of the Jewish religion and culture in a vast region of the earth", says the New York Times. The report declared that the Jewish community behind the Iron Curtain "is kept organizationally in an atomized condition." It said there was no federation of Jewish communities and virtually no communication between local congregations.

In the Soviet Union, the report said, there are only some sixty rabbis, most of them old — "one rabbi for every 50,000 Jews — most of them officiating in rented rooms which substitute for synagogues."

"Not a single synagogue has been built or returned to a Jewish congregation," the report continued. The training of rabbis was prohibited for forty years until 1957, when permission was granted for the opening of a seminary for twenty students in Moscow."

The Jewish population in the Soviet Union "is permitted neither schools nor theatres nor the publication of books and newspapers except on very rare occasions," according to the report.

"This virtually complete blackout of a once flourishing and lively culture is paralleled by equally [illegible] education, and public life," the document says.

The report pointed to the limitation of Jewish students in institutions of higher learning and the absence of Jews in the Soviet Union's foreign service, says the New York Times. It also noted that no mention had been made of the distinguished war records of Jews in official Soviet publications.

The report called attention to the suspension of Jewish emigration from Hungary, Poland and Rumania, and the worsening economic condition of Jews in these countries.

The report set forth two major aims:

1—Equality of rights for Jews in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union in law and in fact within the framework of the existing social and economic system, although "equality under this system is not consonant with the American concept of freedom."

2—The right of Jews to emigrate freely to places of their choice with all their possessions.

The Committee stressed that it continued to oppose "all compulsion on the individual to uproot himself." It pledged its cooperation with other groups, Jewish and non-Jewish, governmental and intergovernmental, in assisting emigrants from Eastern Europe and to influence "the promotion of liberalized immigration opportunities in the United States and other countries."

Early this year, Committee leaders met in New York with First Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan of the Soviet Union to discuss the status of Soviet Jews.

Builder Owned Steamer Sunk By Germans In 1917

Moses Ginsberg, New York builder and ship owner, died in Greenwich Hospital at the age of 85. He lived at the Essex House in New York and had been at his summer home at Greenwich, Conn. Mr. Ginsberg built the Carlyle Hotel, Madison Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street, in New York. His firm, Moses Ginsberg & Sons, won architectural awards for three office buildings at Nos. 280, 261 and 625 Madison Avenue there.

Mr. Ginsberg was a Polish immigrant who came to the U.S. at the turn of the century from London with two shillings in his pocket. Less than twenty years later he was president of his own construction business.

In 1915, Mr. Ginsberg entered the ship field as an operator of sailing vessels, says The New York Times. His American Star Line, predecessor to his American-Foreign Steamship Corporation, owned the steamer Algonquin, which was sunk without warning by a German submarine in March, 1917. The sinking was one of a series of incidents that led to the entry of the United States into World War I.

The American-Foreign Steamship Corporation recently constructed a 23,000-ton supertanker.

In early life Mr. Ginsberg was manager of a private bank in Brooklyn that closed when a New York bank of which it was a subsidiary failed. After an investigation Mr. Ginsberg was vindicated and designated a Federal Court trustee for the bank's liquidation. He had all depositors repaid.

A founder of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, Mr. Ginsberg was instrumental in its merger with the New York Federation, of which he became a vice president and trustee.

Mr. Ginsberg also was a founder of the Albert Einstein Medical College of Yeshiva University; and of the Brooklyn Jewish Center. He was a trustee of the United Jewish Appeal in New York and Miami, Florida; a founder and trustee of Mount Sinai Hospital, in Miami; and an honorary trustee of Brooklyn Jewish Hospital. Through the Moses Ginsberg Family Foundation he had contributed to other charities.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Theresa Helfgott Ginsberg; two sons, Calmon and Morris; four daughters; Mrs. Yvette Rosenson, Mrs. Diana Jaffe, Mrs. Elsie Robinson and Mrs. Sylvia Kaplan; nine grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

Reform Rabbis Say Orthodoxy Not Suited To Israel

Leaders of Reform Judaism in the United States charged that similar movements in Israel were encountering discrimination. They said Reform rabbis were not authorized to perform weddings and that non-Orthodox congregations had been denied facilities for services.

Specifically, they charged that the Z. O. A. House in Tel Aviv had denied the use of its premises to the newly formed circle for Renaissance of Religious Life in Israel. The Z. O. A. House is a cultural center owned and operated by the Zionist Organization of America, whose leadership includes prominent Reform rabbis.

Rabbi Jay Kaufman, of New York, vice-president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, said in an interview that the grievances would be discussed with Premier David Ben Gurion, says the New York Times. Rabbi Jacob Shankman, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Rabbi Jacob Rudin, of Great Neck, L. I., associated themselves with the charges of discrimination.

They were visiting Israel with a pilgrimage of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. Religion and Orthodoxy are virtually synonymous in Israel. Jews who are not Orthodox do not attend synagogue services at all except for a few hundred belonging to new groups like the Circle for Renaissance of Religious Life. These groups are mainly experimental.

The chief rabbinate and other religious bodies are exclusively Orthodox. They strongly oppose Reform rabbis who eat pork, travel on the Sabbath, pray with heads uncovered, and depart from other traditional practices. The rabbinical authorities, who have exclusive authority over matters of marriage and divorce, do not recognize Reform rabbis. They also fight the establishment of Reform synagogues.

Rabbi Kaufman said he did not favor any attempt to transplant American Reform Judaism to Israel because he believed Israel should develop an indigenous liberal pattern. He said it was deplorable that Israel had been prevented from developing beyond the Orthodoxy of Eastern Europe, which was not suited for modern Israel.

Officials at Z. O. A. House said they had been reluctant to permit use of their premises for Reform services because of the bitter controversy that would undoubtedly develop, says the New York Times. They said that they had asked headquarters in New York for guidance but that no instructions had been received.

Israel Cabinet Study Of Riots By North African Newcomers Says Root Is Feeling Of Inequality

A "deep feeling of inequality and discrimination" exists among large sections of Israel's North African immigrant community, a Cabinet-appointed inquiry committee declared at Jerusalem. The committee, appointed to investigate communal rioting by North African immigrants in the Haifa slum quarter of Wadi Salib some weeks ago, added that "in extreme cases there is even a feeling that the discrimination is deliberate."

Special investigating committee reported that there was a widespread feeling among Jewish immigrants from North Africa that they were being discriminated against by Israelis from Western countries, says the New York Times. Its findings were based on a study of the conditions that led to rioting July 9 in the Wadi Salib, a slum district of Haifa.

The committee, which was appointed by the Government, said only a small portion of the North Africans in Wadi Salib were involved in the disturbances. But it said the conditions that had prompted the agitation also existed among many other segments of the 250,000 North American Jews in Israel.

"The committee is convinced that among large sections of the North African community, particularly those from Morocco, there exists a deep feeling of inequality and discrimination," the report said. These feelings were most acute among immigrants who have not been fully absorbed economically, the report continued.

"But it seems that even among those sections of this community which have succeeded in finding their place — and they are by no means a small group — there is a sense of inequality, discrimination", it said.

At hearings in Haifa, a number of North Africans charged that their people were not getting equal treatment in education, housing, and employment. The committee conceded that there might have been instances of discrimination on the "lower levels" of government agencies.

But it emphasized that there was "absolutely no deliberate discrimination" by public and state institutions at the policy-making levels. In fact, it said, there was a tendency by most officials to give special care to "Oriental" immigrants. While admitting that instances of discrimination might have arisen in the lower levels of administration, the committee stated there is a "clear tendency" in institutions setting immigrant absorption policy to give special priority to immigrants from the Afro-Asian world in an attempt to integrate them into Israeli life.

The rioting in Wadi Salib was followed by disturbances in two other communities in which North Africans were involved. There was also a second clash between the police and Wadi Salib residents on July 31, says the New York Times. These outbreaks have caused considerable concern among Israelis, who have been deeply disturbed by allegations that one segment of Israel's Jewish citizens could discriminate against another.

The committee said most North African immigrants had been brought to Israel without their own leaders and intelligentsia. They generally did not have skills useful to Israel, nor did they find long-established settlers from their community already there to help them, as did many Western Jews.

The committee found that many immigrants from North Africa had lost their old culture forms and values before coming to Israel and had not succeeded in replacing them.

The report pointed out that as a rule North African families were large and this had aggravated the problems of housing and maintaining them.

But, the committee said, feelings of discrimination have also developed because the contacts North Africans have with the "established Israeli community" have been only "of a formal nature." "The committee also expresses its regret that numerous and various sections of the settled Israeli public still have many prejudices," the report said.

The committee urged the Government to speed up their slum clearance and housing and to encourage secondary education among the North African immigrants. It also advocated a special co-ordinating authority to "hasten the fusing of the immigrants from various countries."

The committee's report was eagerly awaited because the Wadi Salib riot, which began after a false rumor arose that a North African immigrant had been shot dead by police, shocked the public and was followed by the further shock of demonstrations by North Africans in two other immigrant communities and by a second disturbance in Wadi Salib itself, says the New York Herald Tribune. The North African community in Israel totals 250,000 persons, or one-eighth of Israel's population.

The committee, which dealt only with the first Wadi Salib disturbance, said this riot involved a small proportion of the Wadi Salib residents and there was no justification in connecting the entire North African community with the incident. However, the committee stressed that it is necessary to examine conditions in Wadi Salib and among the general North African community to understand why some persons "were caught up in facts of lawlessness."

Describing Wadi Salib as a densely populated slum, the committee said that most of its wage earners are unskilled and a large number are employed in relief works, thus, feeling an "inability

Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Berinbaum, 5261 Victoria Avenue, celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary. They were married in Poland on August 31, 1898, and have lived in Montreal for more than fifty years. They have two sons and daughters-in-law: Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Berne, 368 Redfern Road; Mr. and Mrs. Isaie Berne, 6780 Fielding Avenue; four sons-in-law and daughters; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wiseman (Fanny); Mr. and Mrs. Max Wagner (Irene); Mr. and Mrs. A. Rose (Ethel), all of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gordon (Beatrice), 4763 Victoria Avenue; and five grandchildren: David and Steven, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Isaie Berne; and Doreen and Barry Gordon; and Douglas Rose.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miller, 5818 Westluke Avenue, entertained at a dinner in honour of her niece, Miss Lorna Freidlander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Freidlander, of Sherbrooke, Que.

Mr. and Mrs. Saul Arshinoff, 5709 Darlington Avenue, entertained at a party at their home to celebrate the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Shirley; granddaughter of Mrs. Sonia Bernamoff, 5760 Darlington Avenue. Shirley wore a pale blue and green checked cotton sheath, with a white collar. Present with the above were: Mrs. Aaron Wilder and son, Stanley; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Arshinoff, uncle and aunts; Charlotte Steingart, Rena Mayoff, Rosalyn Zalter, Teresa Halpin, Sandra Barrer; and Louis Rothstein, and Aaron Bercovici, who entertained as a ventriloquist. A white birthday cake decorated with pink candy rosebuds adorned the table. Shirley spent a two-week holiday visiting Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Kuzon and daughters, Tobie, Linda, and Jo-Ann, of Springfield, Mass.

Montrealers who spent holidays at Scaroon Manor, in Schroon Lake, N. Y., were: Mr. and Mrs. Jack Levine, 235 St. Aubin Street; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Levitt, 5055 Bourret Avenue; Mr. and Mrs. M. Manis, 575 Dorais Street; Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Mazur, 8152 Wevell Road; Misses Sylvia Leibovitch, 4887 Plamondon Avenue; Sherry Levine, 4965 Fulton Avenue; Seryl Lutterman, 4465 Royal Avenue; and David Kruger, 5080 Ponsard Avenue; Joseph Kruger, 3440 Peel Street; Harry Leibovitch, 4300 Western Avenue; Leon and Myer Leibovitch, 4887 Plamondon Avenue; Hyman and Louis Linetsky, 4652 Carlton Avenue.

Miss Sheila Hoffer of Toronto, Ont., spent one month with her aunt, uncle and cousins, Mr. and Mrs. R. Greenhut and family, Arnold, Harvey and Haria.

Mrs. Sally Silverstone, 2201 Maplewood Avenue, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of her son, Robert Meyer, who was called to the Reading of the Law, at Beth David-Beth Yitzchok-Kehal Jeshurun Synagogue. He is the son of the late Al Silverstone; brother of Miss Marilyn Silverstone. Following the services, Mrs. Silverstone was hostess to seventy-five guests at a Kiddush luncheon in the Synagogue hall. She wore a green, silk sheath, made with a round neckline, trimmed with matching satin; and a small hat of beige velvet leaves. Miss Silverstone wore a teal-blue silk sheath; with a bandeau of white feathers. Seated at the head table with the family were: Rabbi and Mrs. I. J. Teicher, Cantor E. Goldberger, the teacher of Robert Meyer; and son, Eric; Cantor J. Dlin, and Mr. and Mrs. John Tiger, uncle and aunt. The bar-mitzvah boy gave a speech. Rabbi I. J. Teicher asked a blessing over the challah. A blue and white bar-mitzvah cake and centerpieces of blue and white asters adorned the table. Here for the occasion were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Larvents, and Michael and Shirley; and Mr. and Mrs. L. Lemieux; uncles and aunts, all of Ottawa, Ont.

DEATHS

Abel Vineberg, of Dorval, Montreal, one of Quebec's outstanding parliamentary journalists, died suddenly on September 8, at the age of sixty-nine years. He is survived by four sisters: Mrs. Reuben Kauffman (Rose), 5280 Victoria Avenue; Mrs. Samuel Solomon (Rae), 6805 Cote St. Luc Road; Mrs. Harry L. Pollett (Lily), 6900 Monkland Avenue; and Mrs. Israel Hamburg (Dora), of Glace Bay, N. S. Funeral services took place from Paperman's. Rabbi Wilfred Shuchat officiated. Burial was at Shaar Hashomayim Cemetery. Members of Mr. Vineberg's family said the death of Premier Maurice Duplessis, with whom he had been close friends before Mr. Duplessis' accession to power, came as a severe blow to him. Mr. Vineberg covered the Quebec scene for over forty years, starting during the Liberal era of the Premier, Sir Lomer Gouin. He also reported from the Quebec Legislature during the days of Premier Alexandre Taschereau and then of Mr. Duplessis. He ended a thirty-eight year association with The Montreal Gazette when he retired on July 1, 1953. The son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Archie M. Vineberg, he was born in Lithuania on April 8, 1880, and was brought to Canada as an infant. His parents first settled in Napanee, Ont., but later came to Montreal. Mr. Vineberg was educated at the Montreal High School. He studied shorthand and became a stenographer with a Montreal clothing firm. His first newspaper job was with the old Toronto World. Later, he worked for the Montreal Star, the Toronto Daily Star, and the Montreal Daily Mail before joining the Gazette in July 1915. His knowledge of shorthand, then virtually obligatory in reportorial work, and his ability to obtain people's trust, led to a newspaper career. He was believed to be the first Jewish reporter to cover the Quebec Legislature and he made friends with politicians of all creeds and party affiliations. Indicative of his popularity was his election as president of the Quebec Legislature Press Gallery. For a time he also covered the courthouse and later City Hall, here. In the First World War, he served with the Highlanders. He was an avid baseball fan in the days of Ty Cobb and played the game himself as an amateur. He was also an angling enthusiast in his younger days. His greatest hobby, however, was books. He was considered a "heavy" reader throughout his life. It was a standing joke that he had read the Revised Statutes of Quebec more often, perhaps, than any other man. His ability to keep a confidence gave him many an exclusive story from Quebec. Often he knew months before anyone else, including members of the party in power, what the government's move would be.

Reverend Kechel Kronick, 6917 Kent Avenue, Montreal, has been appointed musical director of Adath Jeshurun Machzeth Kadosh Synagogue and will lead its double choir and direct its choral activity. Reverend Joshua Wieder, the Cantor, will assist Reverend Kronick in planning liturgical work. This Synagogue is interested in the religious and festive choral music developed in the Jewish communities of Canada, Poland, and Lithuania. Reverend and Mrs. Kronick have two sons and two daughters-in-law: Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Kronick, 857 Kentland Street; Mr. and Mrs. Manny Kaye, 3480 Bedford Road; a son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Rietland (Rebecca), 4946 Kent Avenue; and five grandchildren: Lois and Murray Kronick; and David, Stephen, and Zoe Rietland.

— Hayward

His opinions were highly valued. He had no illusions about politicians but understood their problems well. He helped in the development of several young reporters in Quebec, from opposition papers as well as his own. Many of his exclusive stories were obtained not in the Legislative Buildings but at the Chateau Frontenac, which he made his headquarters. He was seen frequently in conversation with Premier Duplessis and other government officials in the lobby of the hotel. In the years following his retirement, he spent the winters in Florida. But, even though he had ended his newspaper career, he kept the friends he had made during that lengthy period. He would visit Quebec to call on "Maurice" then chat with old friends in the Assembly and the Press Gallery. In recent times, he lived at 125 Riverside Drive, Chateauguay.

Miss Bessie Steinberg, 551 Campden Place, died on Friday, September 4, at the Royal Victoria Hospital, after a lengthy illness. She is survived by three brothers: Samuel and Hyman Steinberg, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Harold, 4379 St. Urbain Street; and two sisters: Mrs. David Steinberg (Fanny), 5551 Campden Place; and Mrs. Norman Kaye Stewart (Mary), of Brooklyn, N. Y. Funeral services took place at Paperman's. Dr. Solomon Frank, Rabbi, officiated. Burial was at the Independent Hebrew Sick Benefit Society Cemetery. Miss Steinberg was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Moni Steinberg; and the sister of the late Sydney Steinberg and Mrs. Betty Wiseberg.

BIRTHS

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rubin (nee Sandra Dalfen), 2465 McNulty Street, on August 24, at the Jewish General Hospital, a son, Murray Steven; brother of Lawrence Stanley, aged two years; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rubin, 2155 College Street, who are the godparents; and of Mr. and Mrs. I. Dalfen, 59 McNider Avenue; great-grandson of Mr. and Mrs. L. Greenberg, 433 St. Joseph Boulevard West. Mr. Greenberg, great-grandfather, held the baby during the ceremony.

MARRIAGES

HERSCOVITCH-BEUTEL

The marriage of Miss Rhoda Beutel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beutel, 836 Pratt Avenue, to Ruby Herscovitch, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Herscovitch, 5532 Mountain Sights Avenue, took place at Adath Israel Synagogue, on Monday, September 7, at twelve o'clock noon. Rabbi Charles Bender officiated, assisted by Reverend M. Mandelcorn. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was gowned in white peau de soie appliqued with lace embroidered with seed-pearl-beads. Her finger-tip-length veil of tulle illusion was attached to a coronet of seed-pearl-beads, and she carried a prayer book with orchids and baby's breath. Mrs. Moe Herscovitch, as matron of honor for her sister-in-law, wore a gown of blue peau de soie, with matching hat and accessories, and carried a cascade bouquet of pink, blue, and white feathered carnations. Misses Marlene Gross and Mona Freedland, as bridesmaids for their cousin, wore gowns of orchid-pink organza; also hats to match; and carried bouquets of pink and white pompoms and feathered carnations. Moe Herscovitch was best man for his brother. The ushers were Ian David and Joshua Beutel, brothers of the bride. Standards of pink and white carnations and roses decorated the Synagogue and hall. Mrs. Beutel, mother of the bride, wore a gown of orchid-pink embroidered peau de soie, with a hat of the same shade. Mrs. Herscovitch, mother of the groom, was gowned in embroidered lace over blue peau de soie; with a matching hat. They had corsage bouquets of orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Ruby Herscovitch spent their wedding trip in Mexico City and Acapulco, Mexico, the bride travelling in pepper and salt knit tweed; with a black and white hat. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gross and daughter, Marlene, of Hackensack, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Owen Miller and son, Sydney, of Quebec City; and Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Abrahams, of Newark, N. J.

Rosh Hashonah In Puerto Rico Means GI Men Plus 150 Families

The minuscule but very active Jewish community of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, which has roots in two wars of our country, and came to maturity in World War II, is getting set for the observance of the Jewish New Year. And, as you might expect, at its services this year, in the Shaare Zedek Synagogue (the only one on the island), GI worshippers will sit beside the 150 families of the congregation. Some will come from the remotest Army, Navy, and Air Force bases throughout the island and a handful from the Navy radar guided missile sites in the Leeward Islands.

"Operation Hospitality," begun back in World War II in partnership with the National Jewish Welfare Board (JWB), continues to the present. The first JWB Armed Services committee in Puerto Rico, set up for GI hospitality in 1941, was headed by Charles Ganes. Simon Benua, a former president of the Jewish Community Center, and one of the founding fathers of the little community, heads the JWB committee. The Jewish community has about 250 families of which 150 are members of the synagogue. It boasts of a beautiful Jewish Center and synagogue on 903 Ponce de Leon Avenue, in Santurce, San Juan. It has an active Hadassah group, a Sunday School, and daily Hebrew classes. It supports UJA and contributes to JWB's morale work. The leader of the congregation is Rabbi Harold Z. Gottesman. Services held in Hebrew and English are Conservative. The community is generous and hospitable, and some visiting Americans can always be found at services.

The Spanish American War, when the Territory was freed from Spain, saw the first faint signs of Jewish life. Chaplain Adolph Spiegel, of the U.S. Army, conducted Rosh Hashanah services at the Elks club. He even attempted to form a congregation of the few French and American Jews on the island. Jewish life was virtually extinct in the island from 1900 until the period of the late 1920s and early 1930s. In those years a handful of Jewish families came to Puerto Rico. Among the 'old immigrants' were Simon Benua, Robert Kogan, and Aaron Levine. They had left Russia and settled in Cuba, while waiting for visas admitting them to the United States.

Feeling at home in the Spanish culture after some years in Cuba, they decided to make Puerto Rico their permanent home. Other early settlers who came as American citizens to the Territory before the war, were Milton Farber, Nathanial Namerow, and Charles Gans, mentioned earlier. Charles Gans had arrived as a boy of 15 with his family from Connecticut more than 60 years ago. The Gans family was the first of the Jewish settlers from the United States. The pre-World War II settlers, who numbered only 40 families, worked hard for economic survival. They were for the most part completely integrated with the prevailing Spanish culture. But they acknowledged their Jewish identity, held services, and observed the Jewish holidays and festivals in backrooms and basements. But they were too few in number to set up an active Jewish communal life, which only came with World War II.

Then thousands of U.S. troops poured into Puerto Rico. JWB, as the government-authorized agency for serving Jewish troops, was at their side. A Puerto Rico JWB Armed Services committee was set up in 1941. On it were leaders of the community, most of them immigrants of the early 1930s. Through participation in JWB's work for servicemen, the community may be said to have taken its first step to an organized Jewish life. It was to go much farther along the road before the war was over in its partnership with JWB.

In 1941, Rabbi Lavy Becker, a Montrealer, sent down by JWB for Passover services, officiated at the first seder ever conducted in Puerto Rico by a rabbi. Commenting on this event and other JWB work for the troops, Dr. Charles Weiss, a dedicated Jew and eminent scientist living on the island at the time, noted that "the Jewish community, thanks to the efforts of JWB, has decided to organize a Jewish Community Center. Jointly with JWB, a rabbi will be employed who will serve not only the military but the civilian population." Early in the war, the community rented quarters for a Center. Milton Farber was its first president. The letterhead of the new Center attested its "affiliation with JWB." Regular Friday evening services were initiated, conducted by Leo Jacobs, and Charles Olshansky, USO-JWB staffers in the island. During the war the embers of Judaism were kept brightly glowing by the Jewish chaplains and civilian rabbis who came on missions to Puerto Rico. In 1943, the late Rabbi Barnett Brickner, at one time of Holy Blossom Synagogue, in Toronto, then administrative chairman of JWB's Chaplaincy Commission, visited the island on a mission concerned with the religious needs of Jewish personnel. With him was Chaplain Aryeh Lev, of the Army Chief of Chaplains Office. Rabbi Lev is presently director of JWB's Chaplaincy Commission. Familiar and beloved figure in the post-war period has been Rabbi Nathan Witkin, USO-JWB worker in Balboa, Canal Zone. Rabbi Witkin, who knows every member of the little Puerto Rico Jewish community by his first name, has for the past 20 years been visiting the island before Passover and Rosh Hashanah in connection with setting up services for the military in the Caribbean.

The post-war years brought many changes for the Jewish community of Puerto Rico. Thanks to "Operation Bootstrap", a ten-year tax exemption plan of the government, about 100 Americans came down with their families. The "new immigrants" of the early 1950s

MAZEL TOV

A DELICIOUS KOSHER CANADIAN WINE

made from sweet Concord grapes by the most famous name in Canadian winemaking!

Years of planning It took more than three years, after the decision was taken to introduce a kosher wine, before the first beautiful decanter of "Mazel Tov" was placed on the market. The strict details of Kashruth had to be arranged with the rabbis, and elaborate testing and research undertaken. From all this came "Mazel Tov"—a wine we are proud to offer from coast to coast in Canada.

Delicious "heimish" flavour This sweet rich wine in its beautiful decanter bottle recaptures the taste you used to know. It is the wine you sipped at the Pesach seders, the wine beside the candles at the Sabbath meal, the wine you made Kiddush with at Yom Tov, and the wine with which you toasted "L'chayim" at every simcha. "Mazel Tov" is a wine you'll "remember" with pleasure as you drink it. It's a wine that says "Mazel Tov" on your lips, as in the glass.

Available now! In Quebec, "Mazel Tov" is on sale at most QLC stores. In Ontario, "Mazel Tov" is available at LCBO stores, and at any of Bright's retail wine stores.

In the Toronto metropolitan area, for free delivery of three bottles or more, phone LE 4-7557.

Taking Children Through The Valley Of Death

BY ANITA ENGLE

Behind the gay, pastel-tinted poster which Israeli artist Dan Gelbart designed for an annual World Child Day, there is a story fantastic enough to have happened to Dr. Zhivago himself. It concerns 50 Jewish boys and girls who were shuttle-cocked about wartime Europe for a year and a half trying to escape the clutches of Hitler's hordes, and Dan Gelbart's efforts to ensure their survival. Because of their Polish parentage, these children had been expelled from Germany in November 1938, and for six months were part of the homeless thousands in Zbaszyn, the No-Man's Land between the German and Polish borders.

The Youth Aliyah office in London — to which I was attached at that time — interceded with the Polish Government, and finally these children, among many others, were allowed to enter Poland. Under the guidance of the artist Gelbart, then only 22 years old, and himself a refugee from Germany, they were placed on a farm near Warsaw for agricultural training until immigration certificates for Palestine would be available.

Three months after they arrived, war broke out, and Poland was overrun with devastating, nightmarish speed. For two weeks the children fled by foot, always just ahead of the advancing German forces. They hid in the forest during the day, and travelled by night to escape the deadly low-flying bombers and the pursuing tanks. Somehow the group managed to get across the border into Lithuania, most of them together, but starving, half-frozen and demoralised.

Many of them had been refugees three or four times. Those who were not already orphaned had now lost knowledge of their parents' whereabouts. "The bitterness of their experience, the filth, and our stark poverty have brought our young comrades to a condition of deep depression and mistrust." So Dan Gelbart wrote to us in London, informing us of their survival, and begging us to find some way of saving them.

For five months the London office tried to find a way of getting those children out of Lithuania to Palestine. The country was surrounded by German or Russian territory, neither possible to cross. The only hope was to get them out by plane.

But how to find the vast sum necessary to charter planes to take 50 persons from Vilna to Holland, the one route by which they could get to Marseilles? There was a time limit as well, for the permits to enter Palestine, which the British Mandatory Government issued, were valid only up to a certain date. The expiration date of the permits was prolonged from December to March, but when I left London for Palestine, with another group of refugee children, we were no nearer to solving the problem of the Vilna children. It looked desperately as if Youth Aliyah might have to abandon these boys and girls after all.

Suddenly, less than a week before the final date on which they could leave Vilna, the Jerusalem office received a cable that money had been found to charter the planes. The Lithuanian children were already on their way. After three days of suspense, we heard that their ship was arriving the next day, April 1st.

I was at the harbour in Haifa when the much-cabled-about Lithuanian group arrived. Even the dock workers were excited, and crowded around to welcome them as if they had been their own children coming home.

We had expected thin, haggard children, not the lively, sturdy youngsters who scrambled out of the launch and joyously set foot on the promised land. Some of the older boys and girls were quite large, but most of the younger ones were pathetically small. Three had only that month turned fifteen. Yet in one year they had all experienced expulsion from Germany, flight from Poland, and privation in Vilna.

We went in buses to the hostel along the sea shore, where lunch was waiting for us. Suddenly in the midst of eating I remembered. What about the boy whose certificate for Palestine had been waiting unclaimed in the London office? He had strayed from the group, and had got lost somewhere in Russian Poland. In Vilna they had managed to trace his whereabouts, and notified him that a certificate for Palestine awaited him in Vilna. It was a matter of chance whether he would succeed in making his way across the border.

But of course he was here, the boys and girls told me. He was sitting at the table right behind me! I had already spoken to him without knowing who he was. I went to him again to tell him how happy we had been when we received word in London that he had been traced. There was hardly a flicker in his poor haunted eyes. He was the only one of the group who showed any signs in his face of what he had gone through. To starve and suffer in a group is one thing. But to starve alone and to hide alone in the face of strange terrors . . .

Time was his enemy too. He had to find some way of getting out of Russian Poland to Vilna in time to join the group for Palestine, or he would lose his certificate, his chance of life. In spite of the soldiers, and in spite of the frost, which was even more dangerous than the soldiers, he got through. He managed to reach Vilna one day before the group left.

The composure of the children was incredible. Still clad in the heavy leather jackets, protection against the Lithuanian winter, they stood in the Palestine sunshine and calmly talked of their experiences in the trains, the airplanes and ship which had brought them across seven countries and two seas within ten days. And with equal composure they talked of their flight from Poland and what they had seen in that ravaged country.

All had scars to show me, many of them left by the great festering sores caused by the filth. Fifteen-year-old Solly, of the round brown eyes and soft baby cheeks (who, together with Oscar, clung to me the whole time we were together), had other scars to show me. They were red welts above the knees where his flesh had burst open from the cold. They had fled in September with only the clothes they happened to have on. Solly had on shorts and a cotton blouse. The children slept in open ditches in the forest, and even the protection of their huddled bodies could not save them from the frost.

During the first months in Vilna, they were without warmer clothes. Only two or three could be outside at a time as there were not enough clothes to go round.

Morgan's New Rockland Store

Henry Morgan & Company Limited eighth branch store, is the fourth such store in the Montreal metropolitan area, strategically located at the junction of the new Metropolitan Boulevard and the Laurentian auto-route, in the Town of Mount Royal, one of Montreal's finest residential areas. The store has two selling floors plus a receiving and storage basement, and has a total area of one hundred thousand square feet. This latest Morgan venture embodies all the features of a modern department store. The interior design and layout were conceived and executed by Morgan's own planning department.

Its wide main floor aisles and the boutique shop atmosphere achieved in the second floor fashion departments, have an air of intimacy, comfort, and convenience. The general colour scheme is muted and delicate, enhanced by brass and lacquer finishes. Hand-painted murals, located at strategic points, and simple, contemporary accessory furniture, upholstered in pleasing colours, add greatly to the charm of this part of the store.

The lighting has been carefully designed, blending fluorescent and incandescent light to give a more-true-colour factor, which enables merchandise to be displayed in correct colour values. There has been a discreet use of decorative plastic wall coverings throughout the store, all of which are washable. Carpeting and vinyl tile coverings have been used in the various departments to complement the merchandise.

Beautifully grained rosewood paneling highlights some of the department locations, and all store fixtures are of selected cherry-wood. Travel to the second floor is provided by forty-eight inch escalators, equipped with cleated step risers as an added safety measure.

A modern beauty salon has been provided, designed to give the maximum of comfort and efficiency. A new feature for a branch store is the auditorium, complete with stage, and a seating capacity of 250 persons, which will be available for special in-store events as well as a community service. The entire store is cooled by the most modern air conditioning equipment. Acoustic tile ceilings are used throughout and the colour of the telephones matches each locale.

Morgan's fall fashion presentation of leading European couturiers

Almost every fashion capital in Europe is represented in our new 1959 collection, with the important developments that have been making news. For example, the very balanced look of the jacket and sleeve reaching exactly the same length; the tiered look in sedate costumes which reveal a cocktail dress underneath; the wide-shouldered kimono sleeve, in either long or short length; the feminine bell-shaped skirts and semi-fitted long torso, particularly under jackets.

CLASS IN COOKERY

STUFFED CABBAGE ROLLS

one pound ground beef
one cup cooked rice
salt and pepper to taste juice of one small onion
one egg

Boil cabbage in hot water until leaves are tender and separate them. In a large bowl mix meat, salt, and pepper. Add the rice, onion juice, and egg. In centre of each cabbage leaf place heaping tablespoon of meat mixture and roll it up. Place cabbage rolls in a large roasting pan containing: the tomatoes from a twenty-ounce tin, one-half cup raisins, a pinch of sour salt, pepper to taste, one teaspoon brown sugar, and one twenty-ounce tin of tomato juice. Bake at 325 degrees from thirty-five to forty-five minutes.

Mrs. R. Strom.
19 Silverton Avenue, Toronto.

MARSHMALLOW HURRY UP CAKE

one and one-half cups cake flour
one-third cup shortening
two-thirds cup sugar
one-half cup milk
one egg
two and one-half teaspoons baking powder three-quarters teaspoon vanilla
one-quarter teaspoon salt

Sift together in a mixing bowl, the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add shortening, vanilla, egg and milk, mixed together. Beat with electric mixing machine, at low speed, for two minutes. Pour into a greased and floured eight-by-eight-inch cake tin. On top of raw batter, place sixteen marshmallows. Bake in a 350 degree oven for forty minutes.

International Cancer Symposium In Israel

About a year ago a little old lady came to the New York office of the Weizmann Institute of Science. Obviously under great stress, it was with much stammering that she brought forth a strange request: Could we dispatch, by air, the Weizmann cure for cancer to her son-in-law, who was dying of that disease in Moscow, Russia? The office spokesman did his best to explain to the anxious Jewish mother that the Weizmann Institute had no cancer "cure" and that, as a matter of fact, no such "cure" existed anywhere in the world. But she insisted frantically that the medicine be sent to the USSR without delay. Overriding all protestations, she whispered: "I know all about it. I promise not to tell any one, but please save my daughter's husband. Only you can do it."

Recently I found the answer to the good mother-in-law's insistence, when somebody called our attention to an item in a Soviet publication. It stated, without any ifs or buts, that the Weizmann Institute of Science in Israel had discovered a cure for cancer but had decided not to make it available to the world, and, especially not to the countries behind the Iron Curtain. In other words, the Soviet press, while extolling, and even exaggerating, the scientific achievements of the Weizmann Institute, charged Israel's scientists with the heinous crime of withholding salvation from the many millions who die each year of the dread disease of cancer.

This entirely unfounded rumor is certain to be revived with renewed "evidence" at the meeting of the International Cancer Symposium at the Weizmann Institute of Science at Rehovoth, Israel. For the selection of Rehovoth as the site of the cancer conference sponsored by the International Union against Cancer undoubtedly will lend credence to Russia's charge. Even though this accusation is entirely unfounded, however, the location of the conference is significant, because it expresses world-wide recognition of the great advances made by Weizmann scientists in the field of cancer research (although no cure is in sight).

The Symposium on Cancer at the Weizmann Institute, opened this month by Israel's Prime Minister, will be a working conference to which the general public will not be admitted. In addition to the Israeli delegates, only twenty-five of the top-notch cancer men from institutions of higher learning, from many parts of the world, will participate. The purpose of the Rehovoth meetings is officially defined as a symposium on "the functional components of carcinogenesis," which, in layman's language, means an investigation of cancer causation. This is the field in which Dr. Isaac Berenblum, head of the department of experimental biology at the Weizmann, has made his world-wide reputation. Dr. Berenblum developed his theories on cancer causation at Leeds University in England, after he had graduated from Oxford. In 1950, Dr. Chaim Weizmann invited him to head experimental biology at the Weizmann Institute.

It was almost two decades ago that Berenblum established his theory of the "two-stage cancer mechanism", which now enjoys wide recognition. The same theory was independently promulgated by Prof. F. Peyton Rous, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. Thus it can said that at present the two-stage mechanism has been accepted in medical circles. Prof. Rous, incidentally, is attending the Rehovoth conference, where the two discoverers of this important advance in cancer research will compare notes. Eight of America's outstanding cancer investigators will take part in the Weizmann Institute Symposium. Among them, in addition to Dr. Rous, will be: Dr. H. B. Andervont, of the U.S. Public Health Service; Dr. H. S. Kaplan, of Stanford University Hospitals; Dr. Jacob Furth, of the Children's Cancer Research Foundation; Dr. L. W. Law, of the National Cancer Institute of the National Institutes of Health; and Canada's distinguished cancer expert, Dr. C. P. Leblond, who heads the department of anatomy at McGill University, Montreal.

Research scientists of this caliber shy away from general publicity. Thus even the scientific press will be excluded from the Israeli Conference, and the medical profession, which is extremely interested in the papers to be read at Rehovoth, will have to wait until the proceedings of the Conference are officially published. One thing is certain: Science and the whole of humanity will profit from the deliberations at the Weizmann Institute, which less than a decade ago began to build in Israel's desert the biology department that today stands as one of the world's major scientific research centers.

MONTREAL MEETINGS

● CANADIAN JEWISH CONGRESS ●

Jewish communities in all parts of Canada have elected delegates to the 12th plenary session, in Montreal, October 29-November 1. It is at the triennial plenary session that the Congress receives its mandate from the Jewish community to represent its interests. Samuel Bronfman, of Montreal, is national president. Saul Hayes, of Montreal, is national executive director. Every recognized Jewish organization, group, and society is expected to send representatives, and there will be participants from each of Canada's ten provinces. Prime Minister John G. Diefenbaker will speak at the dinner in honour of the bicentenary of Canadian Jewry. The conference will also commemorate the 40th anniversary of the founding of Congress in 1919, and the 25th year of its reorganization in 1934. Invitations have been extended to many speakers from the United States and Canada. The complete plenary session program will be announced shortly. Nathan Gaisin is chairman of the national arrangements committee. Chairmen of the standing committees are: Sol Kanee, of Winnipeg; J. S. Midanik, of Toronto; Esmond Lando, of Vancouver; S. D. Cohen, of Montreal; and Professor Jacob Finkleman, of Toronto, Ontario. Louis Rosenberg, research director, has been commissioned to write a "History Of The Jewish Communities in Canada, 1891-1959." This book, the first to cover the more recent period of Canadian Jewish history, will be one of the major publications in honour of the bicentenary of Canadian Jewry. Mr. Rosenberg has already written several books and pamphlets about Canadian Jewry. Formerly executive director of the Congress, western region, Mr. Rosenberg is the Canadian editor of the Universal Jewish Encyclopaedia, and a frequent contributor to Canadian, American, and Israeli journals. Educated at the Universities of Leeds and London, England, as a sociologist and statistician, he has made the sociology of the Canadian Jewish community his special field of study. He is a Fellow of the Royal Economic Society; a Fellow of the American Sociological Society; a member of the YIVO Institute for Jewish Research; of the Canadian Historical Association; of the Jewish Historical Society of England; of the American Jewish Historical Society; and of the American Statistical Society. The published work will be placed in the National Archives, at Ottawa, and in libraries in each of the ten provinces.

ISRAEL CABINET STUDY

to achieve real integration in the economy." Some of the North Africans living there believe they are suffering from discrimination and feel isolated from the settled part of Israeli society. This feeling of discrimination, the committee said, is felt among large sections of the North African community throughout the country.

The committee, which is headed by a district court judge and includes a sociology professor, a member of Parliament, an attorney, and a rabbi from an immigrant town, said the North African community had lost its old cultural forms and system of values — partly even before emigrating — and had not yet succeeded in creating new ones.

Among other problems of the community, the committee's report said, is the fact that few of its intelligentsia had come there and that the newcomers, unlike immigrants from many other areas, did not find veteran settlers from their own community to help ease their integration.

One reason for the feelings of discrimination is that most of the contacts of the North African immigrants with the established Israeli community have been only of an impersonal nature, the committee said. It added that "numerous and various sections of the settled Israeli public still have many prejudices."

Mrs. Lee, mother of the groom-elect, wore a brown lace dress, which had a V-shaped neckline; three-quarter-length sleeves; and a sheath skirt. Mrs. Stern, grandmother of the bride-elect, wore a blue lace dress, made with a round neckline and a full skirt. Miss Gloria Shefsky wore an ivory-shaded lace dress, designed with a scooped neckline, short sleeves, and a sheath skirt. Miss Radow wore a black and white organdy printed dress which had a white trimmed collar that came to a deep-V in the back; and a bouffant skirt. Miss Patti Stern, the bride-to-be, wore a red printed silk dress, cut with a V-shaped neckline at both front and back, and fashioned with a harem skirt. Her corsage was of red roses and white carnations. The head table was adorned with vari-coloured flowers and red roses, arranged with greenery, on a green table-cloth. Each of the smaller tables held a centerpiece of roses. Here for the occasion was Miss Peppy Radow, of Jamaica, N. Y.

Alfred, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ignace Stoppel, 300 Rushton Road, was called to the Reading of the Law, in celebration of his bar-mitzvah, at Viewmount Synagogue. A luncheon followed at their home. The following evening at the Synagogue one hundred and eighty guests were received at a dinner. Mrs. Stoppel wore a light blue brocade satin gown fashioned with a heart-shaped neckline and a bouffant skirt; with a pink orchid corsage. Seated at the head table were: Mrs. Fanny Horowitz, Mrs. Vera Rexenberg, great-aunts; Mr. and Mrs. L. Weaderhorn and children, Wendy and Daniel; Mr. and Mrs. Gus Rexenberg and sons, Larry and Gerald, all cousins; Walter Sheffield and son, Arthur, uncle and cousin. The head table decorations consisted of two bouquets of vari-coloured flowers, with flowers forming the name of Alfred, and blue candelabra on a blue table cloth. Gus Rexenberg was master of ceremonies. Isaac Machtinger asked the blessing over the challah. Those who lit candles with the above family members were: Mr. and Mrs. W. Sheffield and son, Arthur; Mrs. Fanny Horowitz; Mrs. Vera Rexenberg, Mr. and Mrs. G. Rexenberg and sons, Gerald and Larry; Mr. and Mrs. L. Weaderhorn and children, Wendy and Daniel; Mr. and Mrs. P. Kornbloom, Mr. and Mrs. D. Wise, Mr. and Mrs. L. Sniatowski, Max Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. H. Rosenzweig, Allen Josl, Stanley Brown, Michael Charles, Irving Frish and Mr. and Mrs. E. Grau. Here for the occasion were: Mr. and Mrs. E. Grau, of France; Charles Weinberg, of Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Keen, of Hamilton, Ont.; Mrs. Fanny Horowitz, Mrs. Vera Rexenberg, both of New York; Mr. and Mrs. L. Weaderhorn and children, Wendy and Daniel; and Mr. and Mrs. G. Rexenberg and Larry and Gerald, all of Long Island, N.Y.

Henry Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cooper, 21 Markdale Avenue, was called to the Reading of the Law, in celebration of his bar-mitzvah, at Beth Sholom Synagogue. He is the brother of Howard and Gerald; grandson of Mrs. Pearl Goldschlager, 704 Crawford Street, and the late Hyman Goldschlager; and of the late Mr. and Mrs. H. Cooper. A Kiddush luncheon followed. That evening at the Synagogue four hundred and twenty-five guests were received at a dinner. Mrs. Cooper, mother of the bar-mitzvah boy, wore a pale blue silk cotton gown, which had a round neckline off-the-shoulder; was trimmed with pearl-beads and rhinestones on the bodice and hemline; and fashioned with a bouffant skirt. She had an orchid wrist bouquet. Mrs. Goldschlager, grandmother of the bar-mitzvah boy, wore a blue lace gown, with a scooped neckline and full skirt; and a corsage of roses. Seated at the head table with the above family members were: Mr. and Mrs. M. Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. A. Wolgelerenter, Mr. and Mrs. N. Wasserman, uncles and aunts of the bar-mitzvah boy; Rabbi David Monson, Mr. and Mrs. Y. Cooperberg, and Cantor and Mrs. J. Cooper; all cousins of the bar-mitzvah boy. Joseph Cooperberg asked the blessing over the challah. The head table decorations consisted of three centrepieces of mixed flowers; a cake, and two white candelabra on a gold table-cloth. Ann Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Lewis; and Beverly Greenspan, Rhonda Turner, Jacqueline Blomberg, Anita Fedson, Lloyd Rubinoff, Michael Cohen, Morris Gotkind, Morris Goldberg, David Reiner, and Laurie Lazarus took part. Those who lit candles with the above family members were: Terry and Laurie Lazarus, Karry and Esther Wolgelerenter, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Weinberg, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cooperberg, all cousins of the bar-mitzvah boy; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wasserman, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wasserman, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cooper, all uncles and aunts; Rhonda Turner and Beverly Greenspan.

● BUREAU OF JEWISH EDUCATION ●

will mark the first decade of its existence, with an official celebration on Sunday, November 15. The Bureau began to function officially in September, 1949, when, after a survey by Dr. Uriah Engelman, of the American Association for Jewish Education, its establishment was recommended by the central organizations of the community. In an expansion of the Jewish school system in Toronto, in number of schools and in total enrollment, there is now a total of 35 schools, affiliated with the Bureau, with an enrollment of 8,400 pupils. Many of these pupils attend day schools or afternoon schools which provide an intensive educational program of ten or more hours per week. The annual budget of the subsidized schools is $584,462. The Bureau administers a Jewish Teachers' College, subsidized by Canadian Jewish Congress. Fifty students are enrolled in the College, which provides a four-year course in higher Jewish studies and pedagogy; and a total of 34 teachers have been graduated in the past four years. These now occupy teaching positions in various schools of Toronto; and Ontario, and the U.S. Dr. S. B. Hurwich is president. Former presidents are Samuel Posluns and A. Shifrin. Dr. Joseph Diamond has been director of the Bureau since its inception. Dr. S. B. Ullman and Alexander Brown are consultants. Sixty teachers of the Jewish schools in Toronto participated in a summer seminar on Jewish education, arranged by the Bureau, with the Department of Torah Education and Culture, of the Jewish Agency whose director is Rabbi Zvi Tabori. Participating lecturers were Dr. Gershon Churgin, professor of philosophy and Hebrew literature at Yeshivah University; Rabbi Hyman Chanover, consultant to the American Association for Jewish Education; Morris Benathen, consultant to the Jewish Education Committee of New York, and associate professor of education at Yeshivah University, and Stern College. Dr. Diamond, and Dr. Ullman, presided at the Seminars.

MARRIAGES

ATLAS-JACKS

The marriage of Miss Margaret Jacks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Jacks, of Kirkland Lake, Ontario, to Emmanuel Atlas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cooper, 635 Manning Avenue, was solemnized on Sunday, August 30, at half-past five o'clock, in Beth Tzedec Synagogue, with Rabbi Stuart Rosenberg officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a princess gown of white peau de soie satin, the bodice of which was trimmed with beads and pearl beads. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion, edged with Chantilly lace, was attached to a crown of pearl beads; and she carried a Bible with a white orchid and stephanotis. Miss Pearl Jacks, sister of the bride, was maid of honour. She wore a pale pink taffeta gown, made with a full skirt; and a headdress of appliqued veiling. The junior bridesmaid was Miss Elaine Ennis, niece of the groom. She wore a blue, embroidered organza gown; and had a flowered head-band. They carried white pom-poms and pink carnations and roses. David Ennis, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Irving Goldberg, Murray Davidson, Larry Cohen, and Paul Jacks, brother of the bride. The Synagogue was decorated with white and pink flowers. Large white bows decorated the aisles. A dinner and reception followed at the Synagogue. Mrs. Jacks, mother of the bride, wore a lilac-coloured peau de faille gown; fashioned with a full skirt; and had a white orchid corsage, with a matching hat. Mrs. Cooper, mother of the groom, wore a champagne-coloured sheer gown, which had a round neckline, and a sheath skirt. She had a matching hat; and a mauve orchid corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Atlas spent their wedding trip in the Catskill Mountains. The bride travelled in a green dress, with a matching coat; and had an orchid corsage.

NOW WE TAKE STOCK OF OURSELVES

the water. The Biblical reference is the prophet Micah who promised the Jews that their sins would be forgiven and that the Lord would cast them (Tashlich) into a place where they would not be remembered or ever brought up again.

If a person goes through self examination sincerely, he is bound to have a feeling of guilt. Who does not, when he must face his Maker and acknowledge all shortcomings and failures? But one must not wallow in a feeling of guilt too long for it binds the mind in a neurotic net. On the other hand in getting rid of guilt feeling too quickly a person feels cheated and robbed of the opportunity to work it out himself. The Tashlich ceremony symbolically indicates to the Jew that he may be confident of the Lord's forgiveness and yet that he must recognize his spiritual mistakes and himself bring them to be cast into oblivion, a necessary step to a direct and unvicarious absolution.

Customs have developed in the home that give the mistress of the house a subtle feminine avenue of expression of the sentiments of the Holy Days. Challehs for Rosh Hashonoh were baked in the form of a ladder signifying that man may climb to any spiritual heights that he desires if he but put his mind to it. In some places they were baked in a round form signifying heavenly mercy which is endless like the circle. When the Motzi is recited, the traditional blessing over bread, a piece of Challeh is dipped in honey to symbolize a sweet year.

Sweet and candied foods are the menu of the day for this reason. In some houses carrots are eaten because in Yiddish they are called "meren" which is a homonym of multiplying. The Jew, his ranks continually decimated with pogroms and persecutions, hopes that in spite of these his number will increase. It is also a custom to eat the head of a fish to indicate the hope that Israel will some day be at the head of the family of nations.

As the old year draws to a close and we pause to take stock of ourselves, let us hope that our value has not diminished and that we will have the courage to manage our spiritual affairs properly in the coming year.

ROSH HASHONAH IN PUERTO RICO MEANS GI MEN PLUS 150 FAMILIES

were of the managerial class, running factories, and manufacturing establishments of various kinds. The influx brought demands from the community for more adequate religious and communal facilities. The deep longing for a synagogue and a new Center got impetus in the first instance from the semi-annual visits of Rabbi Witkin. It was spurred by backing and support of JWB, which had held the little Jewish group together and guided them to the establishment of a synagogue and Community Center. Services had until then been held in rented quarters in an office building.

In 1952, the community purchased an old mansion in the residential area of San Juan, called Santurce. The community then called on JWB for aid. Leon Spector, head of its building bureau, flew down. He drew plans for a complete alteration job to meet the religious and social requirements of the community. In May, 1956, the Puerto Rico Jewish Community Center and Shaare Zedek Synagogue (named after a German synagogue burned by the Nazis) was dedicated. Rabbi Israel Goodman was named as first rabbi. From the start, GIs from all parts of the island have been made welcome at the Center. The Jewish community of Puerto Rico is basically a businessman's enclave with insufficient leavening from working class, professional and artistic elements. Men like Simon Benus, Robert Kogan, Milton Farber, Nathaniel Namerow and Aaron Levine, all businessmen, have been stalwarts.

The Jewish community has had in the past a number of notables: Judge Cecil Snyder, former United States District Attorney for Puerto Rico and former chief justice of the Supreme Court; Louis Sulzbacher, Justice of the Supreme Court of the Territory; Judge Adolph E. Wolf, who served many years as associate Justice of the Supreme Court; Dr. Jacob Hollander, who organized the Territory's revenue system; Joseph Jacobs, an eminent consulting engineer and builder of dams; Dr. Julius Matz, who made contributions to the control of diseases attacking citrus fruits; Dr. William Hoffman, a parasitologist, who did important research in the area of tropical diseases; Dr. Charles Weiss (mentioned above) whose work led to the control of the tropical disease, sprue, a terrible disabler of thousands; and Dr. Leo Rowe, former director of the Pan American Union, who headed a Commission which revised and compiled the laws today governing the island.

In a vitally strategic area, the community of Puerto Rico is carrying on in the tradition begun in the early days of World War II. A community grown to maturity has time to think of those who need her services. Its rabbis are serving as part-time chaplains. Last Passover, Rabbi Gottesman officiated at the Caribe-Hilton at a community-sponsored seder attended by 150 servicemen and their families. The community is all set again for services and hospitality for Rosh Hashonah. In the light of this service, who can gainsay that, through its partnership with JWB, the little community has found its way into the mainstream of Jewish life.

Now We Take Stock Of Ourselves

BY RABBI SOLOMON J. SPIRO, OF THE JEWISH CONGREGATION OF ST. MARTIN, QUEBEC

On December 31st everyone in the business world goes through a period known as the closing of the books. This operation takes a lot of time and occupies frequently a battery of accountants with noses buried in all the ledgers of the concern. Outstanding bills, checks, and all sorts of accounts are hurriedly put in order before the closing of the books.

Why does a firm close its books? It must know where it stands. The office may be running very smoothly, the salesmen selling well and a normal amount of cash may be in the bank and yet a firm may be losing money. Maintenance costs may be too high, a certain line not selling as expected. When the accountants close the books these matters become apparent and steps can be taken to rectify them. If, however, no time is taken off to see what is happening the same mistakes will be repeated year after year and the firm will finally find itself bankrupt.

The Jewish religion has provided for a period of closing of the books not for financial matters but for personal matters. Religion is concerned with the talents we possess and the use we make of them. We may be losing spiritual dollars and cents because some of our given gifts are rotting away with disuse. Religion is concerned with the effects of our every-day actions. We may lose track of their significance precisely because we have been doing them every day.

Recently a distraught young woman, mother of two, came to me. Her husband had suddenly decided to terminate their relationship. In later speaking to her husband, trying to ascertain the cause of such precipitate action, I realized it was not anything specific but rather an accumulation of things. The tragedy was compounded in the fact that the two were what the neighbours described as an ideal couple. Here were two people who had the talents for success in their lives and did not use them. They never had an accounting of whether they were performing the role of proper husband and wife. They never had a spiritual closing of the books.

A similar negligence can be ours in many ways. We might think that we are very kindhearted but frequently drop an unintended remark at a meeting or gathering that hurts someone very deeply. We may think that we are doing the utmost for the education of our children by giving them schooling, ballet lessons, art classes, nature study clubs and a million other things, but fail to give them the course they will need most as an anchor of security in a crazy world of atoms and Communism, their faith that can be learned only in Hebrew School and by coming to the synagogue, led by their parents.

We need a period of time when we stop from our activities and take stock of ourselves to see where we stand, as persons, husbands, wives, parents, and Jews. The period which tradition has set aside for us is the High Holy Days season. In the serene atmosphere of a house of worship, as our lips move in prayer, our hearts contemplate an inventory of the soul. This is the reason we spend so much time in the synagogue and this is the reason we do not celebrate New Year's with parties and noisemakers.

Self-examination is a serious matter and requires undivided attention as well as Divine guidance. We ask the Lord to make up any of the losses and deficits that we might have incurred during the past year and pledge a better deal for the future. In Hebrew the process is known as Cheshbon Hanefesh — an "accounting" of the soul.

In order to further the theme of a call to spiritual self-examination our tradition has employed religious symbols in the form of ritual and custom. The foremost of these is the Shofar. It is probably the oldest instrument known to man. It was blown at the dawn of history to awake a sleeping camp which was in danger or when tribal elders were to gather for some important matter. Today we blow the self-same instrument to awake us from our lethargy, for if we give no heed to our responsibilities as human beings we too are in danger. Man has progressed to an unimagined extent socially, economically, and scientifically, but humanly he still harbors the same passions as his brothers who existed at the dawn of history.

Today he has even struck out for the conquest of outer space but has not developed the merest knowledge of how, to reach the inner space that is his soul. It is the primitive Shofar that reminds us of this fact. There must be a period when we leave the pride of our progressive accomplishments and concentrate on what has been man's unmet spiritual challenge since history began: the conquest of himself.

Many books have recently been written about the Jewish faith and its harmony with the principles of psychiatry. Some of the authors have even suggested that Freud took some of his brilliant formulations from the Kabbalah, Jewish mysticism, which does indeed have many references to what later became accepted psycho-analytical principles. In truth there are many aspects of our faith that in psychological terms are very healthy. Tashlich is one of them.

This ceremony is performed on the afternoon of the first day of Rosh Hashonah (this year the second day because of the Sabbath). The entire congregation goes to a body of water, recites appropriate prayers and symbolically casts its sins into

Even this accumulation was barely adequate. If they were out for more than a few minutes they came in frost bitten. All had their ears and hands and feet frozen.

Solly's brother, a great curly-headed boy of 16, was with the group as well. Expelled from Szbaszyn together with their parents, when the Youth Aliyah obtained permission for them to leave the No-Man's Land, the brother went with his age group to the training centre at Grochow, and Solly went with his group to the centre at Czenstochown. The parents were released later and went to relatives in the interior of Poland. During their flight the two brothers met, and together they left their groups to go to their parents, then in Russian-occupied territory. They stayed with them for a while and then made their way to Vilna where they rejoined the group. Their parents had only these two children, and knew that they might never see them again.

"They felt lucky that we could go," Solly told me. "In Palestine we can live like other people. What will happen to the boys and girls that have to stay in Poland?"

"How did you get out of Russian territory?" I asked. "We smuggled across the frontier," Solly said, in his soft, childish voice. "When we saw soldiers coming, we hid. But we didn't see such terrible things," he added. "The terrible things were in the German part. We only saw a few hundred people killed. Oscar saw thousands." "Yes," Oscar said, "I saw thousands of dead people."

There was something so appealing about the youngsters, I couldn't leave them, but stayed on with them for two days. In contrast to the deep depression and mistrust which Gelbart had written about, I found only warmth and faith, and touching trustfulness. They had all sorts of little gentlenesses for each other, in their gestures, and in their speech. And always they talked of Gelbart, their guardian angel who had shepherded them through the valley of death, whose devotion had restored them to joy of life again. They showed me his picture, a beautiful, fair-haired, blue-eyed young man, only eight years older than his youngest ward.

"When is Gelbart coming to Palestine?" I asked. "He said he would follow us in another month," they told me, "and when Dan says something, you can be sure it's true." This was in 1940. Dan Gelbart joined his young comrades in Palestine, as he said he would. He is now a well-known graphic artist, and a member of Kibbutz Alonim, which was founded by Youth Aliyah's first graduates.

800 From U. S. And Canada Attend Israel Bond Conference

A collection effort is now in progress in parts of the United States and Canada to enable the National Economic Conference for Israel, opening in Chicago, Illinois, to celebrate the attainment of the $400,000,000 mark in Israel Bond sales since the inception of the drive some eight years ago. As of September, according to Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, vice-president of the Israel Bond Organization, receipts had brought the total to more than $397,500,000. "We are confident that the intensive collection activities now being carried on by many hundreds of volunteers throughout the United States and Canada will bring total receipts since May, 1951, to the $400,000,000 mark by the time our national conference opens in Chicago," Dr. Schwartz said.

Convened to inaugurate the fall phase of the campaign to sell $75,000,000 in 1959, the Chicago conference will hear Israel's Finance Minister, Levi Eshkol, Foreign Minister Golda Meir, and Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, of Cleveland, Ohio, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Israel Bond Organization. More than 800 business and communal leaders from the United States and Canada will attend sessions at the Sharman Hotel, in Chicago. Among the other speakers at the Israel Bond conference will be: Dr. Y. Foerder, chairman of the Bank Leumi Le-Israel; Leon Keyserling, former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers; Abraham Feinberg, president of State of Israel Bonds; Dr. Schwartz, Mrs. Joseph Cherner, chairman of the National Women's Division; and Ora Schweitzer, of the Atomic Energy Commission of Israel.
